

FFA Magnet prototype for high power pulsed proton driver

- FFA natural candidate for high power pulsed operation
- Necessity to use trim coils in the main magnets to adjust field gradient as a function of beam intensity.
→ Field gradient created by saddled (to keep magnet compact) trim coils around flat pole.
- Prototype magnet manufactured with measurement planned to investigate field quality and local correction schemes

