Commercial Career Physicists

Tuesday 4 June 2019 10:45 (30 minutes)

The future can seem uncertain for those contemplating private/commercial sector jobs after graduating with a degree in physics. When graduates finally realize that their physics education has taught them some useful skills, and given them knowledge beyond the laws of physics, they become more confident. Hidden in their training are abilities that are useful to the outside world, and with some polishing and filling in the gaps, their job prospects excellent. But, there are many 'wake-up' moments along the way.
