Overview

› Scientific outstanding achievement: announcement

› Thanks giving

Scientific Outstanding Achievement

› Approx. in the same year of

Higgs Boson Observation

Discovery of Gravitational Waves

› We are proud to announce a new › revolution in science
› that is expected to change our lives
› ...

Experimental set up

› New ad-hoc, complex experiment has been designed and run

› Experiment known as RT2016

› Collaboration among more than 200 outstanding scientists from more than 15 countries

› The experiment is very close to the definite proof of the following physics fundamentals statement …

Statement

›Murphy's Conjecture may fail: Counter-example

›Murphy's Conjecture

All what starts well, will end up badly
All what starts badly, will end up even worse

›First principle stronger the 2ⁿᵈ Principle of Thermodynamics

›Possibly more comprehensive than the Unified Theory

RT2016 Counter-example

› RT2016 started with the unexpected shut down of the email service for a whole day in my lab
  › On Sat. June, 4, email at RFX crashed
  › We had no email service for a whole day, while 250 scientists were arriving in Padova!

  › I never experienced a single email failure in my 30-year career

  › In Italy we use to say in such cases

  › "Fortune is blind, whereas Misfortune can see very well!"

RT2016 Counter-example

› The Opening with the Short-courses was a disaster

› Network after the first two bits failed completely
› Saturated bandwidth

› BUT ...

RT2016 Counter-example

› BUT unexpectedly after that, the Conference has run smoothly

› So we are close to proof that
  › Murphy's Conjecture (as introduced in previous slides)
  › Can fail

› So, my recommendation is:

› Let's close this Ceremony ASAPS before
› Getting Some Possible Earthquake
› Being Hit by Falling Meteorites

› CROSS YOUR FINGERS
