

Contribution ID: 440

Type: Talk

CMB temperature and polarisation anisotropies: a goldmine for cosmology.

Monday 14 December 2015 11:20 (35 minutes)

Over the last two decades cosmic microwave background (CMB) anisotropies have revolutionised our view of cosmology. Generations of experiments have successively uncovered the amplitude of the temperature fluctuations at large scales, the existence of acoustic peaks in both temperature and polarisation and the small scale damping. These observations have now established a minimal cosmological model with unprecedented accuracy of its cosmological parameters. I will show how CMB temperature and polarisation anisotropies are powerful cosmological probes of the concordance model.

Author: AGHANIM, Nabila (Universite Paris Sud)

Presenter: AGHANIM, Nabila (Universite Paris Sud)

Session Classification: Plenary talks